  Bulles, krachs et rebonds

Ces dix dernières années, les régulateurs du marché sont parvenus à limiter les conséquences des grandes crises économiques. Et si celle que nous traversons était plus sérieuse ?

Crise asiatique, faillite du hedge fund LTCM, éclatement de la bulle Internet, faillite d'Enron et enfin crise des subprimes : cinq crises de durée et d'intensité variables, mais cinq crises économiques majeures en dix ans. Chaque fois, le système financier mondial a été mis en péril, chaque fois une explication spécifique a été avancée, chaque fois le spectre de la crise de 1929 a hanté les commentateurs, chaque fois un sauvetage des acteurs défaillants a été organisé et chaque fois l'économie a rebondi. À tel point qu'on en vient à se demander si l'économie mondiale n'est pas devenue incroyablement résistante et si, à la différence de 1929, nos gouvernants et nos régulateurs n'ont pas trouvés les moyens de juguler les crises. Mais avec la crise des subprimes, les remèdes traditionnels ne semblent plus fonctionner. Cette crise, aboutissement de dérèglements majeurs, serait-elle la plus sérieuse ? Maîtrise-t-on réellement l'art de la gestion des crises ou sommes-nous en train de nous rapprocher, crise après crise, de la remise en cause de tout le système ? Une question majeure que ce film explore.
